

2009 All Male Consider Maryland College Tour

Opening doors to college for our region's future leaders!

Spring 2009

The CollegeBound Foundation college tour experience is often the defining moment for a Baltimore City School student who dreams of a college education. Young men who previously couldn't quite imagine themselves on the grounds of a large university or walking across campus to go to class suddenly realized they were actually doing it...really making the dream of college a reality. All who attended the tour were African-American males and will be the first in their family to go to college.

This CollegeBound sponsored exploratory road trip showcased a diverse selection of college choices designed to open the world of higher education to Baltimore City School's great kids! The young men toured the campuses of

- the United States Naval Academy,
- Frostburg State University,
- University of Maryland Baltimore County,
- St. Mary's College of Maryland,
- University of Maryland Eastern Shore,
- Hood College,
- McDaniel College, and
- Salisbury University.

Each student was required to fill out three college applications with transcripts attached and perform a self-assessment of their transcript prior to the tour.

Can you visualize the broad smile and look of amazement when these kids stepped onto a college campus for the first time?
