What College Means to Me: I equate college with growth and self-discovery. During college I experienced my intellectual growth spurt. I was challenged and tested in ways that I hadn't been tested before and it was in that moment that I realized that knowledge was truly powerful. My college experience was the result of the cumulative effect of God, family, friends, mentors and teachers who deposited exactly what I needed to commence and complete college. In turn I was given the opportunity to use what I learned in college, and to deposit that into other inner city youth. So in a sense, college means personal growth and positive community growth. As a CollegeBound alumna I am blessed to have the ability to encourage others to pursue that growth.

The Lawyers' Campaign for CollegeBound: For 26 years, CollegeBound has helped tens of thousands of low-income and first-generation Baltimore City students realize their dreams of a college education. This year, Rosedale Federal Savings & Loan will maximize your contribution through an unprecedented $100,000 Challenge Match. By giving to the Lawyers' Campaign, you're giving young people the chance to transform their own lives, to increase their opportunities, and to enrich the social and economic fabric of our city.
